New child care tax credit bill

Council Speaker Christine Quinn announced a child care tax credit for middleclass families.

The proposed state legislation will allow parents with incomes of up to $170,000 to apply for the tax credit. With child care credits from all state and the federal government, middle-class families will receive tax credits of up to $1,000 for one child and $2,000 for two or more, Quinn said. ALISON BOWEN

City looks to bump the smoking age up to 21

No smokes. NY has cigarette smokers in its crosshairs once again.

The city is cracking down on smoking again, this time by proposing to raise the minimum age to buy tobacco from 18 to 21.

The City Council is taking up legislation that would make New York City the first major city in the nation to have a minimum smoking age above 19 years.

Several towns in the country have raised the tobacco purchasing age to 21, including Needham, Mass., in 2005, and Canton, Mass., earlier this month.

Council Speaker Christine Quinn, one of the bill's biggest proponents, noted that many smokers in New York start smoking before the age of 21. Her hope is that this legislation could minimize that number.

"By delaying our city's children and young adults' access to lethal tobacco products, we're decreasing the likelihood they ever start smoking," Quinn said.

The legislation's sponsor, Councilman James Gennaro, was emphatic about the benefits this legislation posed.

"When it comes to smoking, the science is clear," Gennaro said. "The earlier you start, the harder it is for you to quit."

Health Commissioner Thomas Farley noted that one-third of all smokers die from the habit.

The bill's advocates estimate that raising the smoking age to 21 could reduce the smoking rate among 18- to 20-year-olds by 55 percent.

- Among 14- to 17-yearolds, smoking would be cut by up to two-thirds.
- About 90 percent of the people who were asked by minors to purchase cigarettes for them were between 18 and 21.

King says to monitor Muslims

After Boston. Rep.
Peter King said he believes the FBI should be doing more to keep an eye on Muslims in America,
the Washington
Times reports.

King, a Long Island Republican, reportedly made these statements in an interview Sunday on Fox News.

"Ninety-nine percent of Muslims are outstanding Americans, but the fact is, that's where the threat is coming from," King said.

In another Fox News interview, King noted that he did not think probable cause was needed "just to follow someone."

King is the chairman of the House Homeland Security Subcommittee on Counterintelligence and Terrorism.

King said the FBI "overall does such a great job" but asked if they're "not flagging these people clearly enough to local law enforcement."

Tamerlan Tsarnaev, and Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, the two brothers who are suspected of planting the bombs that exploded at the Boston Marathon last week, are ethnically Chechen Muslims.

The elder brother, Tamerlan Tsarnaev, was questioned by the FBI a year and a half ago because of his increasingly fundamentalist religious views, but was apparently not monitored further.

King advised that the FBI take a cue from the NYPD in its approach to surveilling Muslim communities.

"[They should be] going into the communities, monitoring, following if you will, and not being afraid of political correctness," King asserted.

Peter King

No political correctness

King has made clear that he is not afraid of political correctness.

After a clip of Tom Brokaw was played in which Brokaw stated, "The fact is that Islamic rage is still out there," King was asked his thoughts.

He responded positively, then scoffed, "If I had said it that strongly two years ago, The New York Times would've called for me to be impeached."

Boston bombing. Brothers may have been en route to NYC

The Tsarnaev brothers, the alleged suspects in the Boston Marathon bombings, were reportedly on their way to New York when they hijacked a car late Thursday night, according to The New York Times.

As details of the original plan emerged, Boston Police Commissioner Edward Davis said authorities believe the brothers had plans for more attacks.

When the brothers stole a Mercedes-Benz sports utility vehicle, they kept the driver hostage while they drove around attempting to use the driver's ATM card to withdraw cash.

The suspects reportedly told the driver they were going to go to New York, a senior United States official reportedly said on Sunday, though it was unclear if they told the driver what they planned to do

Brothers and arms

Authorities recovered four firearms they believe the suspects used.

- The brothers made at least five pipe bombs.
- An M-4 carbine rifle was found in the boat where the younger brother was captured.

once they arrived.

Authorities recovered four firearms they believe the suspects used, and discovered the suspects had made at least five pipe bombs.

Boston Mayor Thomas Menino told ABC he believed the brothers acted on their own and were not part of any group.

Poll: NY voters expect more pol arrests in state

Politics. Ninety percent of voters say corruption is a serious problem.

More than 80 percent of New York voters expect more arrests among state lawmakers, a new poll showed.

The Siena College poll also revealed that nine of 10 voters believe corruption in the state legislature is a serious problem. Forty-one percent believe it's a "very serious" problem

The results came the same month that state

Sen. Malcolm Smith was arrested for attempting to bribe his way onto the Republican mayoral ballot. Just days later, Assemblyman Eric Stevenson of the Bronx was arrested in a separate bribery scan-

According to the poll, voters overwhelmingly support legislative term limits 82-17 percent. They also favor limiting candidates to one party line 55-40 percent, and they support having full-time state lawmakers with no outside jobs 54-42 percent.

Gov. Andrew Cuomo's favorability rating dipped slightly to 62 percent this month, down from 64 percent in March.

One week

Pause at time of bombings

The city of Boston paused at 2:50 p.m. yesterday to mark the moment a week ago when the two bombs made of pressure cookers and packed with nails and ball bearings tore through the crowd.

In the days that followed, investigators examining thousands of images from surveillance video, media coverage and spectators taking pictures were able to pick out two men as suspects, later identified as the Tsarnaev brothers.

Police said the suspects made enough additional bombs for them to believe that more attacks were planned.

Bombing suspect charged in hospital bed

Suspect. A magistrate judge stood by as Tsarnaev was charged yesterday.

Federal prosecutors charged badly wounded Boston Marathon bombing suspect Dzhokhar Tsarnaev in his hospital bed yesterday with using a weapon of mass destruction, a charge that could result in the death penalty, officials said.

"Although our investigation is ongoing, today's charges bring a successful end to a tragic week for the city of Boston, and for our country," U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder said in a statement.

Tsarnaev, 19, was also charged with malicious destruction of property resulting in death.

Tsarnaev, an ethnic Chechen college student suspected of carrying out the attacks with his older brother, was unable to speak after he was captured with throat injuries sustained during shootouts with police.

The fact that he was charged indicated the previously sedated defendant was communicative because the magistrate judge would have to be satisfied he was aware of the proceedings.

Police previously declined to comment on media reports he was communicating with authorities in writing.

The case. Boston bomb prosecutor is known for tough record on crime

As the top federal law enforcer in Massachusetts, U.S. Attorney Carmen Ortiz has taken heat for being tough to a fault and coming down too hard on some defendants.

But as she builds a possible death-penalty case against suspected bomber Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, the unflinching approach that earned her opponents in the past could become a legal asset for the biggest case of her career, according to attorneys who have faced off against her.

"The criticism lately has been that they've overcharged some people and been overly harsh," said Peter Elikann, a Boston defense attorney. "I don't think that's relevant for Tsarnaev because no one is going to accuse any prosecutor of making too big a deal out of this case."

Relationship repairs. US, Afghanistan and Pakistan to meet for talks in Brussels

Afghan President Hamid Karzai will travel to Brussels today to meet U.S. Secretary of State of State John Kerry and senior Pakistani officials to discuss the flagging Afghan peace process, an Afghan presidential spokesman said yesterday.

The meeting had been arranged by Kerry in order to repair relations between Pakistan and Afghanistan following weeks of tension relating to border disputes and the peace process, Karzai's chief spokesman, Aimal Faizi, said in Kabul.

Iran's nuclear program poses the greatest threat to the credibility of the global pact aimed at halting the spread of atomic weapons, a senior U.S. arms control official said yesterday.

The Islamic Republic has a "long history" of deceiving the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) and its nuclear enrichment program far exceeds that needed for civilian use, said Thomas Countryman, assistant secretary for International Security and Nonproliferation.

Canada thwarts plot to blow up international rail line

Investigation.

Police said various Canadian security forces had conducted joint operations in the two cities.

Canadian police said yesterday they had arrested and charged two men with an "al Qaeda-sup-ported" plot to derail a passenger train.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police said it had arrested Chiheb Esseghaier, 30, of Montreal, and Raed Jaser, 35, of Toronto in connection with the plot, which authorities said was not linked to the Boston Marathon bombings but likely had connections to al-Qaeda.

Neither is a Canadian citizen.

"The RCMP is alleging that Chiheb Esseghaier and Raed Jaser were conspiring to carry out an al Qaeda-supported attack against a VIA passenger train," Malizia said.

VIA is Canada's equivalent of Amtrak, operating passenger rail services in Canada.

U.S. officials said the attack would have targeted a rail line between New York and Toronto, Canadian police did not confirm that.

"Had this plot been carried out, it would have resulted in innocent people being killed or seriously injured."

Gulf spill. BP had sought to shift blame for the 2010 disaster that hurt the local economy and environment.

Halliburton Co. is in talks to settle private claims against it in a trial to determine how to allocate blame for the 2010 Gulf of Mexico spill, the oil-field services company said yesterday, as it took a $1 billion pretax charge for a possible deal.

"court-facilitated" helped puri talks helped push Halliburton shares up more than 3 percent, even though the charge pushed the company to a first-quarter loss.

The news came just days after the conclusion of court proceedings for the first phase of the trial over claims brought by the U.S. government and Gulf Coast states, as well as private parties affected by the worst U.S. offshore oil spill.

While Halliburton is not the subject of direct government actions, BP Plc. has tried to hold the company and rig owner Transocean Ltd. partly responsible for damages.

Halliburton did the cement work on the Macondo well, which spilled more than 4 million barrels of oil.

A BP spokesman would not comment on whether the talks extended beyond Halliburton. Halliburton

Get a job after graduation

Martin Yate, best-selling author of "Knock 'Em Dead: Secrets & Strategies For First-Time Job Seekers," has these five tips for students.

You're free

The good news is that you got what you wanted: independence. The bad news is that no one is going to pick up after you anymore. Whether you fail or succeed in life is now all up to

Plan ahead

You are at the start of what will be a 50-year work life that will feature job changes about every four years. You can either guide the trajectory of your life by learning about career management and become successful, or you can leave it up to chance and almost certainly fail.

Take aim

No one in corporate America has the time or inclination to find you a nice job based on your degree and objectives. You have to decide on a target job, learn about it and go get it. There is no time to waste.

Narrow it down

You will need a résumé focused on a specific job and a LinkedIn profile that reflects that message. Both are important parts of the new job search, so take advantage of them before you graduate.

Think it out

Many grads want to be successful and have their own business right now. Many try, and most fail and never try again. This failure often stems from lack of practical business skills. All too soon, wage discrimination will push you out of corporate America, so use your core professional career as on-the-job training for making your later entrepreneurial efforts successful.

Ivy league. Princeton chooses a longtime insider as president

Princeton University chose a longtime insider as president as universities prepare for new challenges, like greater cost scrutiny and the advent of online education.

Princeton's 20th president, Provost Christopher Eisgruber, sat in the No. 2 role for almost a decade, gaining experience during the financial crisis. Ivy League member Yale University followed the same playbook in selecting Peter Salovey, its provost since 2008. Salovey held various administrative roles during his three-decade tenure at the New Haven school.

The schools, along with fellow Ivy League member Dartmouth College, will all have new presidents by July 1. All of them looked close to home for leadership, selecting alumni from academia with administrative experience as president. In their choice, the search committees steered clear of high-profile candidates from politics and government such as Dartmouth alumnus and former Treasury secretary Timothy Geithner, or Yale law grad Hillary Clinton.

"They didn't bring in a change agent, but someone to continue steering the ship in the direction it was already going in," says Raymond D. Cotton, an attorney who works with universities on leadership and governance.

Eisgruber, 51, a constitutional scholar, has been Princeton's provost since 2004 and a member of the faculty since 2001. He replaces Shirley Tilghman, Princeton's first female leader, who took charge in 2001.

Among the challenges Eisgruber says he will face is increasing the level of student-faculty engagement and making sure the research Princeton does is important. BLOOMBERG

GEORGE CICCIARELLO-MAHER

In his new book, "We Created Chavez: A People's History of the Venezuelan Revolution,"

Drexel political science professor George Cicciarello-Maher examines one of the most polarizing figures in modern Latin American politics.

CHAVEZ ABSENCE WILL BE FELT

How did you connect with the "people" your book references?

I was living and teaching in Venezuela in 2006-2007, and my students were political organizers from across Venezuela who had come to study in Caracas. They provided intimate access to people that others might not be able to interview: radical organizers from across the country, former guerrillas, militia members and leaders of a variety of social movements that contributed to Hugo Chavez's rise to power.

Chavez is a polarizing figure in Latin America. What did you make of that?

Chavez was certainly a polarizing person, but social change rarely comes without polarization. In some senses it was this very question that drew me to study Venezuela: political science and other academic scholarship on the subject in the United States is dreadful, tending to simply echo common misconceptions or impose a vision of U.S.-style democracy on Venezuela.

What did you discover on the ground in your research about Chavez?

What I found in practice was not a strongman, but an increasingly conscious and mobilized population ripe with social movements. Chavez played a major role in pushing this development forward. His absence will certainly be felt.

Do you believe that # relations between the U.S. and Venezuela will improve under Nicolas Maduro, who assumed the presidency this month?

Despite claiming to want improved relations with Venezuela, the Obama administration has refused to take the first step toward a thaw: recognizing Maduro. You cannot improve relations with a leader that you fail to even recognize.

Khloe Kardashian has been booted off Fox's "The X Factor," while her co-host Mario Lopez will remain for the third season.

"Khloe Kardashian will not be returning to co-host 'The X Factor,'" the show's producers said in a statement. "We really enjoyed working with her and wish her all the best in her future endeavors." (Translation: Don't let the door hit you on the way out, KKI)

Lopez will join returning judges Simon Cowell and Demi Lovato, with at least one more judge yet to be announced.

"I'm thrilled Mario is back for Season 3 of 'The X Factor,'" said Cowell in a statement. "Hosting a live show and keeping the judges — especially Demi — in line, is not an easy job, but Mario is a pro and we are glad he's coming back."

No disrespect to L.A., but Nick Lachey doesn't think it's any place to raise a child — at least not his 7-month-old son, Camden. Which is why he and wife Vanessa Minnillo are packing up and heading to Ohio, he tells Access Hollywood. "I loved growing up in Cincinnati, where I'm from. My brother's there, his kids are there, my parents are there," Lachey says. "I want to try to give him the most normal childhood he can have."

Bynes' behavior explained

So what's the source of Amanda Bynes' latest spate of bizarre antics during her stay in New York City? "Amanda's increasingly disturbing behavior is related to the fact that she smokes pot," a source claims to Radar Online. "It makes her more paranoid and instead of mellowing her out, it does the opposite. Amanda begins talking faster and just can't seem to sit still." Bynes was most recently photographed walking the NYC streets with a massive scarf obscuring her face and head. Pot? Is that what they're calling meth these days? I don't know. I'm old.

Reese speaks out on arrest

With the mug shot from her arrest in Atlanta for disorderly conduct making the rounds, Reese Witherspoon is speaking out about the headlinemaking incident. "Out of respect for the ongoing legal situation, I cannot comment on everything that is being reported right now," Witherspoon says in a statement. "But I do want to say I clearly had one drink too many and I am deeply embarrassed about the things I said. It was definitely a scary situation and I was frightened for my husband, but that is no excuse. I was disrespectful to the officer who was just doing his job. I have nothing but respect for the police and I'm very sorry for my behavior." Witherspoon reportedly got into an argument with an officer (she infamously played the "Don't you know who I am?" card) after husband Jim Toth was pulled over on suspicion of driving while intoxicated. Both were arrested and briefly

More details on Ozzy

Ozzy Osbourne may have come clean about his recent battles with drugs and alcohol, but that doesn't mean the public gesture was enough to patch things up with wife Sharon Osbourne, according to the Daily Star. "She just wants out at this point," a source says. "Ôzzy seems to think he can win her back, but Sharon isn't so sure as she's been living in a private hell." Exactly what kind of a private hell are we talking about here? "He kept accusing Sharon of trying to kill him. It was heartbreaking for her," the source says. "He was living in an imaginary world for most of the time and seeing a lot of things that weren't even there. He was running around in the same clothes all the time, not washing."

CHRISTA PARRAVANI

In her attempts to understand her twin sister's downward spiral, the author follows in her footsteps, losing her marriage and nearly her life.

WITH OR WITHOUT HER

In the gripping memoir "Her," Christa Parravani describes what it was like to grow up alongside - then lose to a drug overdose - her identical twin. And she begins with a startling statistic: After a twin dies, the surviving twin's life is immediately at risk.

In her attempts to understand her sister's downward spiral (which starts by eating one of her pills, found wedged in a crack on the kitchen floor) she follows in her footsteps, losing her marriage and nearly her life. She told Metro about using the book as a way to crawl out of that space — to pen

the memoir, she incorporated some of her sister's writings, found under her bed in a Tupperware

How did you decide when to use Cara's writings?

When something would get really difficult for me - it felt too emotional or I'd gotten to a place where I felt like I couldn't go on because I was exhausted, I was sad or I just kind of plain missed her - I thought, here's the moment to allow Cara into the book. In the beginning of writing, she was appearing a lot. As time went on and I got more confident in my abilities as a writer and I got further from the grief, I found I needed to rely on to be so unflinchingly honest? It seems like you held nothing back.

I wrote the book as if no one would ever read it. It was sort of a love letter to my sister. It was a way and not to be forgotten.

In order to write a book that tells truths that are necessary, you have to forget about embarrassing

'Parties' shines with warmth and Light

Review. Sparkling performances from Jessica Hecht and Judith Light make this witty Yuletide banter shine all the brighter.

Jews celebrating Christmas, without a Chinese restaurant in sight: It would seem like a premise without much promise. But in "The Assembled Parties," at the Samuel J.

Friedman Theatre, playwright Richard Greenberg turns gossamer into gold, with a healthy dose of warmth and humor. Sparkling performances from Jessica Hecht and Judith Light make his witty Yuletide banter shine all the brighter.

In a rambling apartment on the Upper West Side, Julie (Hecht), sisterin-law Faye (Light), son Tim (Alex Dreier or Jake Silbermann), and family friend Jeff (Jeremy Shamos) share two Christmas dinners 20 years apart. The first, in 1980, is widely attended; in 2000 it's just the foursome. Both are hosted by Julie, who gave up a brief but brilliant film career to raise a family. And family is what the play's about. Julie and Faye have known the joy and especially the pain of marriage and motherhood, with their attendant compromises, disappointments and losses.

Greenberg gives acerbic Faye a string of zingers, which Light delivers impeccably. She's a riot. But the play belongs to Julie, the woman-child both knowing and naïve. Hecht captures all her contradictions with gentle grace. And Shamos, as a friend of Julie's older son half in love with her, adds a note of quiet, steadfast support.

A little light in substance, "The Assembled Parties" is sometimes heavy-handed in exposition. But its spirit — Julie's embrace of life as beautifully embodied by Hecht — transcends its minor flaws.

David Gordon Green is back

Tribeca Film Festival. Here are two films to consider when planning today's festival schedule.

'Prince Avalanche'

At a time when Terrence Malick was often MIA, there was at least David Gordon Green ("George Washington," "All the Real Girls"), one of the filmmakers' too-few copycats. Then he started making stoner comedies. The segue into "Pineapple Express," "Your Highness" and "The Sitter," although actually often wonderful, is unheard of in film history; it would be like if Michelangelo Antonioni had suddenly turned to Bond parodies. Green's new "Prince Avalanche" is happily only almost a return to form.

Paul Rudd and Emile

Hirsch play construction workers spending their summer largely alone, repairing a stretch of highway in central Texas destroyed by wildfire. Rudd is comically serious; Hirsch is comically not. They bicker, bond and talk girls. Remade from the Icelandic film "Either Way," this develops into a brosbefore-hos comedy, albeit one with funky rhythms and textures. Both actors (Hirsch, especially) do fine work, perched somewhere between caricature and real-life sloppiness. Each character envisions themselves as something they're not, someone more confident and in control, and the fun of the film is watching them discombobulate, eventually with the aid of drink. It's a modest lark, and its goofier textures are a reminder that, to be frank, Green's stoner comedies are often better than some of his "serious" work.

'Greetings from Tim Buckley'

The late Jeff Buckley was the son of the similarly doomed troubadour Tim Buckley, whom he met only twice. Daniel Algrant's drama jumps between father and son, with Jeff (Penn Badgley), a thenunknown, being summoned to a tribute concert for his dad, occasionally interrupted by young Tim (Ben Rosenfield), all footloose and fancyfree. Algrant doesn't lean too hard on simplistic connections and contrasts. But he does OD on sensitive singer-songwriter cliches, with Jeff alternately whimsical and brooding. But the real Buckleys were probably this silly in real life, too. matt prigge

Interview. Going American with Colin Firth and Emily Blunt

People tend to freak when a Brit adopts an American accent, or vice versa.

"It's not that big a deal for us," confesses Emily Blunt. "We just see it as another character, and taking on another voice." Blunt stars with fellow countryperson Colin Firth in "Arthur Newman," as two people on the run from their lives. In the film, both actors talk American.

"I've rarely done a film in England that doesn't include an American actress, often doing an English accent," jokes Firth. Firth, like Blunt, has a very proper English accent — or at least one would assume. "The accent that people think comes naturally to me is not the one I grew up with," reveals Firth. "I am from what is known as the 'west country' of England." He says he deliberately lost his native accent when he was first trying to be an actor.

"In England you're trained to learn what is known in our field as 'BBC English," he says. "I think people I went to school with probably got a bit of a shock when they first heard me trying to sound patrician."

"There's a tendency in England that if you come from a family that speaks a bit posh that you want to reject that," says Blunt. "A lot of kids who come from upple-middle-class family walk around [adopts Cockney-ish accent| talking like that, know wha' I mean?"

But working outside one's station is good, says Firth. "If every actor played exactly what they were, then every film would be about a bunch of neurotic actors." MATT PRIGGE

PLUS Quoted "Most of our quests are seasoned world travelers for whom the destination is still the attraction." Kevin Wallace

Riverboat cruising

Destinations.

Here's how you can travel to multiple destinations without having to lug your suitcase.

Ocean cruising has its Tropical destinations, all-you-can-eat buffets, water slides, bowling, free booze: It's a $30 billion-dollar business meant to cater to every whim. But sometimes the excessiveness of ocean cruising can overwhelm. What if you want to experience the joys of traveling by sea without thousands of people crammed alongside you - without paying extra for excursions or having to adhere to a rigid schedule while visiting increasingly homogenized ports of call?

Riverboat cruising

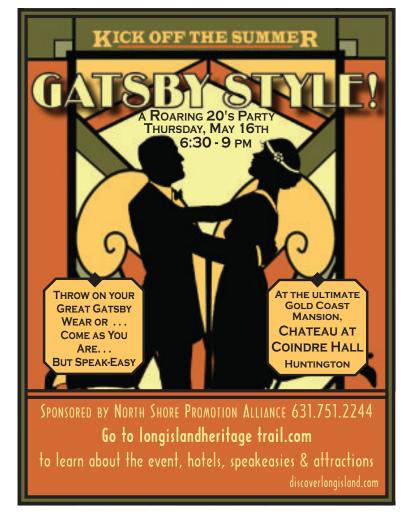

plucks the aspects that make ocean cruising so attractive — the ability to hit multiple destinations without unpacking; the collegial atmosphere on board; an international, knowledgeable staff; a cosmopolitan experience while being more refined and smaller than their big-white-boat counterparts. As the name implies, riverboat cruising uses smaller vessels that stick mainly to rivers, mostly in Europe but also in Asia and the South Pacific, the Mediterranean and Northern Africa, and even Antarctica.

"Most of our guests are seasoned world trav-Travel, a premiere riverelers for whom the desboat cruising company tination is still the main based in Boston. "You unattraction. For them, it's pack once, then sail right not about all-night bufinto the heart of ports great and small, where fets or skating rinks or sightseeing and interculother novelties you find aboard big cruise ships tural activities are always it's about the discovery," included." says Kevin Wallace, COO of Vantage Deluxe World

With riverboat cruising, you sacrifice water slides for accessibility and a more unique experience. Smaller boats mean you can slip into smaller ports of call — you usu-ally just walk off the boat and into the center of town. But riverboat companies aren't naive, nor are they stuffy. They include the perks Americans know and love: fullservice cocktail lounges with live entertainment, Internet cafes, excursions and, yes, even all-you-caneat breakfast and lunch buffets (as well as a formal sit-down dinner every

Wallace is celebrating the launch of the latest addition to their fleet, the River Splendor. The new vessel, part of a $120 million investment by Vantage, has a busy year ahead: After its March christening in Antwerp, Belgium, it will spend this year cruising the Rhine, Main and Danube rivers between Amsterdam and the Black Sea on Vantage's most popular package, the Majestic Rivers of Europe: Castles, Cathedrals and Fairytales (with stops in Vienna, Budapest and the Czech Republic). It will also be part of Vantage's Gateway to the Black Sea itinerary that takes travelers from Budapest along the Danube all the way to the Black Sea resort of Constanta, Romania.

So, with these trips, instead of onboard bowling you'll just have to enjoy a home-hosted lunch with a family in Croatia instead. In lieu of a Broadway musical at night, you'll have to settle for an exclusive classical concert at the Kursalon in Vienna.

Sounds like a pretty good trade-off, no?

You're about to go on tour with Pitbull. How do you keep on top of your beauty regimen on the

I could go for two days without a shower, but I always take care of my skin and my face. The rest of my life is chaos, but I'm pretty religious about that. I cleanse and moisturize all the time because I'm prone to having dry skin. I've also started putting a tiny, pea-size amount of retinol in my night cream. It supposedly helps your skin exfoliate constantly.

In your song "TiK ToK," you sing about brushing your teeth with a bottle of Jack. Are you the type to fall asleep with your makeup on?

Whiskey isn't necessarily my first choice when it comes to dental hygiene. I always wash my face. Sometimes I just leave the eyes because I like my makeup better the next morning, it looks naturally wild. It creates this sexy, smoky eye that I don't know how to create myself. It looks great.

Speaking of eyes, you seem to have a thing for glitter.

I cover myself in glitter! I pour it on the ground, lay in it and roll around. Then my glitter roadie sprinkles it all over me. His job is to make sure every inch of my body is covered.

Is he a makeup artist? No, he just has a beard.

Your hair — the waves, the cornrows — it must be high maintenance.

My hair is a constant battle. It's like the fifth member of my band. I have to keep it healthy. But it's a struggle when I'm bleaching and styling it constantly. So I sleep in Kerastase Deep Conditioner, Bumble and Bumble Mending Conditioner or Moroccan Oil. When I don't have someone prodding my head, I tie it up in a messy bun.

You recently wrapped filming your MTV documentary, "Ke$ha: My Crazy Beautiful Life." Did you keep on a full face of makeup throughout?

You'll see me with no makeup, no hair [done], no nothing. I'm running around without a bra on, looking so disheveled.

A lot of tabloids have made a big deal about your recent weight loss.

Has fame changed you, physically?

Of course. I have to be stricter than I ever was before. When I train for my tour, it's like I'm training for an athletic event. Every morning when I wake up, I try to meditate and get in the right mental headspace in order to kick ass. With my first record, I didn't realize how many eyes would be on me. This time around, I'm prepared.

Talking to your children about the Boston bombings

Parental quidance.

How parents should handle psychological injuries following terrifying ordeals.

One week after the Boston Marathon bombings, the healing is only just beginning for many families dealing with the less tangible injuries of psychological trauma. Metro asked Dr. Kate Roberts, a Massachusetts-based child psychologist and parenting coach at Kate Roberts & Associates, how parents should handle psychological injuries following such terrifying ordeals.

"Children directly affected will have symptoms of acute trauma reaction — things like not being able to stop thinking about the event," she says. "Their mind jumps back on images even if they're playing or busy doing something. They experience troubling, intrusive thoughts. Noises and the unexpected can be especially startling."

Parents might share

Parents might share similar symptoms, which can also include sadness and mood changes. But for children, traumatic events are a very new experience: "There's a depersonalization," says Dr. Roberts. "Their world is shaken and they don't have enough life experience to put it into context."

The endless media loop covering events like Boston and Sandy Hook can be harrowing, particularly to young minds. To support a child's healing process, Dr. Roberts advises parents to start a dialogue and be patient.

"Ask them how they feel, but don't push it if they are reluctant to talk," she says. "If your child is exhibiting signs of fear — perhaps they're reluctant to go to the playground — don't force them. Reintroduce children to normal activities incrementally and only fully engage when they are ready."

Parents are often eager to see improvement in their child's behavior and emphasize positive signals, while ignoring negative ones. "In due time more normal activity will ensue," Dr. Roberts says, "but initially there's not a lot of space where they feel comfortable, because they are not comfortable in their own minds."

Advice

Family counseling can help

Dr. Roberts says parents shouldn't err on the side of caution.

"Engage the child in counseling — the earlier, the better. Family counseling is important so that parents can be there and understand the healthy coping mechanism the child adopts and then reinforce it."

Memories of opener fade in Game 2 defeat

NBA. The Nets brick their way to a loss as the series heads back to Chicago.

This was the style the entire world expected in a playoff game between the Nets and Bulls. There would be no more pushing the tempo and running up and down the court for transition baskets like Game 1.

Instead the Nets found themselves in a grinding postseason game that had several similarities to their four regular season games against the Bulls, when they didn't score more than 90 points in any one.

A late run at the end of the first half seemed to indicate they could but a slow start in the second half eventually doomed the Nets to a 90-82 loss last night, ensuring they will play a fifth game seven days from now at home.

First they will have to play two games in Chicago with Game 3 coming Thursday night and Game 4 taking place Saturday af-

The Nets started 2-for-9 then went 16-for-30 to get within one at halftime on a C.J. Watson buzzerbeating 3-pointer. It was among the few times they did not encounter resistance from Chicago's vaunted defense.

The Nets missed their first five shots of the second half and went 2-for-19 with 11 points in the third quarter.

The Nets rarely developed a consistent rhythm offensively, epitomized by Deron Williams, who scored eight points on 1-for-9 shooting. Williams missed his first six shots before he hit a long jumper with 6:35 remaining in the third.

Joe Johnson was not better. Johnson missed his first four shots of the second half, finishing with 17 points on 6-for-18 shooting. Brook Lopez led the Nets with 21.

/here's Rose?

Derrick Rose was scratched again last night, and although he's being treated as a game-time decision each night, the Bulls aren't in a rush.

Bulls head coach Tom Thibodeau was an assistant with the Knicks in 1997-98 when the team lost Patrick Ewing.

"That experience taught me it's the right thing to do." Thibodeau said. "If Derrick can come back. we want him back."

Smith earns top sixth man honor

Knicks shooting guard J.R. Smith's career is a paradox, so it should come as no surprise that his regular season ended with a bit of irony, as he was named the NBA's Sixth Man of the Year

Smith bristled at the start of the season when head coach Mike Woodson declined his pleas to start while guard Iman Shumpert was rehabbing from a torn ACL. We bumped heads time to time, but I appreciate everything that he's done for me," Smith said about Woodson. "I've been known as such a selfish player for so long, I just wanted to show everybody that I can be a team guy and it's all about team. TONY WILLIAMS

McClain arrested again

New Ravens linebacker Rolando McClain continued to add to his rap sheet yesterday. The 23-year-old was arrested for disorderly conduct and resisting arrest. McClain was arrested in January for having tinted windows and then lying to police about his identity. More seriously, he was convicted of four misdemeanors last May for his involvement in a shooting. Those were later dismissed.

MLB. Cano associate had relationship with Biogenesis drug clinic

Add Robinson Cano to the list of names connected to Biogenesis the Miami clinic MLB is investigating for providing performance-enhancing drugs to athletes.

Cano, at least, only appears tangentially, as opposed to teammate Alex Rodriguez.

Sonia Cruz, the head of Cano's RC24 charity foundation, appears on the clinic's records, according to ESPN. Cano and Cruz have both denied any connection to the clinic.

Records show Rodriguez purchased steroids and HGH. metro

NFL. Jets would be willing to trade down if right trade arises

The Jets might not be done wheeling and dealing yet, even with the draft three days away.

Just a day after they traded star cornerback Darrelle Revis to the Buccaneers for the No. 13 pick in the draft, the Jets might be looking to move back in a draft short on top talent but relatively deep. The Jets' original pick in the draft at No.

9 could be targeted by teams looking to move up, according to one team source familiar with the Jets' thought process heading into the draft.

"Now, with the trade for Revis giving the Jets another pick in the top half of the first round, that ninth pick has emerged as somewhat of a luxury for the team," the source said. kristian dyer

Revis calls Idzik, Jets liars on way out door

NFL. The former Jet was introduced to Tampa Bay media yesterday.

Darrelle Revis is doing his best to make Jets fans get over him quickly.

In a confrontational call with media, Revis, the former Jets cornerback who was traded to the Buccaneers on Sunday, sounded off about the deal.

"I felt that type of vibe

"Why do I think the Jets traded me? I don't know, maybe vou need to ask John Idzik that."

Darrelle Revis, Buccaneers CB

that they weren't truthful," Revis said. "But I don't feel anything — it's over. It happened. I need to move on. This is a new chapter in my life, and that's that."

Revis couldn't bring himself to answer diplomatic why he was traded.

"I have no idea. I think that's a question for John Idzik," he said. "I don't have that kind of control to say if I stay or go as a player.'

He also snidely answered why Jets owner Woody Johnson, who has a penchant for signing big names to big contracts, would want to let the best defensive player in franchise history be dealt.

"Am I a Jet anymore?" Revis said. "Well, then that should answer all the questions."
